Offering more than 100 current clinical, teaching, research, and global topics all specifically targeted for family medicine.
Dear members,

As we look at the period of June 2019 through May 2020 in our rear-view mirror, the COVID-19 pandemic dominates the landscape. We know it has been a challenging year for you and the communities you serve. We are deeply appreciative of the dedication and perseverance you have demonstrated throughout this crisis.

Just as you have pivoted to provide care, teach, and collaborate in new ways, the College of Family Physicians of Canada (CFPC) has nimbly switched gears to meet your needs and advocate on your behalf while maintaining our regular services and programs. We are proud to have supported you and worked with you over the past year to address new priorities, find solutions to challenges, and advocate on issues affecting family medicine.

This year’s report provides a few highlights of these efforts. Looking ahead, we will continue to cover new terrain in the pandemic. As always, we are here to assist you along the way, learn from your experiences, and continue to build a bright future together for family medicine in Canada.

Your needs are our priorities

Advocating for family physicians

The College is committed to supporting our members and regularly reaches out for input to understand what you need for your work, your well-being, and your patients. This helped inform our advocacy efforts over the past year.

Pandemic supplies and support
The CFPC engaged with Health Canada and the Public Health Agency of Canada to emphasize the need for family practices to have stable supplies of personal protective equipment, appropriate remuneration for virtual care, and appropriate mental health support during the pandemic.

Survey on COVID-19’s impact
A survey of family physician members showed how family doctors had transformed their work in response to COVID-19.

Patient awareness
Canada’s Chief Public Health Officer acknowledged our request to remind patients that family practices were open and not to postpone important medical appointments.

Payment models
Given the shortcomings of fee-for-service models brought to light by the pandemic, we called on policy-makers across the country to shift to blended physician remuneration models.

Virtual care
The Virtual Care Task Force, a collaboration of the CFPC, the Canadian Medical Association (CMA), and the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada (Royal College), developed and released Virtual care: Recommendations for scaling up virtual medical services.

Family medicine terminology
The CFPC defended the unique value of family physicians with the position statement Appropriate Use of Family Medicine Terminology, which opposes the use of these terms by non–medical professionals to describe their services.

Promoting family medicine as a career
In response to members’ requests for the CFPC to promote family medicine to medical students, we kicked off a national campaign, Choose Family Medicine, that highlights the breadth of the discipline.³

Federal election priorities

After polling members in 2019, we shared family physicians’ top three federal election concerns with parties and candidates: the supply of health care providers, universal pharmacare, and access to mental health services. These issues were reflected in the election platforms of leading political parties. The College hosted a live-stream health care debate with representatives from the four major federal political parties. This was a first for the CFPC.

Support for individual advocacy

The CFPC’s federal election website kept CFPC members and voters informed about the health care features of major parties’ platforms. It included an automated letter-writing tool that allowed CFPC members to contact candidates in their ridings to let them know about key priorities for family doctors. More than 1,000 letters were sent using this tool.

Universal pharmacare

The College signed the joint Pharmacare Now statement as one of more than 170 national and provincial organizations calling on all federal parties to work together to implement universal, public pharmacare during this government’s mandate.

Access to opioid agonist treatment

The CFPC’s Addiction Medicine and Prison Health Member Interest Groups released the Position Statement on Access to Opioid Agonist Treatment in Detention, calling for opioid agonist therapy to be widely available to incarcerated individuals across Canada.⁴

Appropriate testing

As part of the Using Antibiotics Wisely campaign, we collaborated with Choosing Wisely Canada to raise awareness about appropriate UTI testing and antibiotic use among older adults in long-term care.

> We are counting on the federal government to enhance the infrastructure needed to deliver virtual care to patients across Canada. Show your support for policy tools that remove barriers to providing virtual care to better serve patients.
Supporting ongoing learning

We listened when you told us you want more high-quality continuing professional development (CPD) and other learning opportunities. We continue to deliver new ways to learn, including our popular clinical webinar series. In response to the pandemic we also quickly took action to curate and develop resources to help members stay safe and up to date.

COVID-19 resources
In March we created our COVID-19 web page to provide timely resources and trusted links.

Rapid publishing
Between March and the end of May, Canadian Family Physician (CFP) published 39 blogs related to COVID-19 that generated 32,995 page views.

Podcasts
The CFP Podcast debuted, with the first 15 episodes downloaded 11,555 times. CFP and the Besrour Centre for Global Family Medicine (Besrour Centre) also collaborated on a podcast series about international family physicians’ COVID-19 experiences.

Clinical webinar series
Our clinical webinar series rapidly switched gears to create weekly sessions on “The COVID-19 Pivot,” drawing 59,990 views over 10 weeks between March and May. Popular topics included adapting to virtual care and protecting doctors and patients during the pandemic.

CPD sessions on demand
FMF Live On-Demand Virtual Education (FMF LOVED) went live in 2020, making top sessions from Family Medicine Forum 2019 available for Mainpro+ certified credits.

Extended Mainpro+ cycles
In recognition of the significant pressure members were experiencing, the College waived the 2019–2020 annual CPD requirements and extended all Mainpro+ cycles by one year to give participants more time to acquire their 250 credits.

Trend watching
The Mainpro+ CPD Report 2018–2019 was released, our first annual summary of participation and certification trends.
Fostering innovation

In addition to supporting the Honours and Awards Program, the CFPC built on existing relationships and attracted new funding to expand research, enhance CPD programs, and respond to COVID-19.

Awards and grants
Through the 2019 Honours and Awards Program, the Foundation for Advancing Family Medicine (FAFM) presented awards, grants, and scholarships to family physicians, residents, and students that included $413,610 in funding.

New funding
The CFPC and the FAFM announced the receipt of $3.58 million in funding over five years from Scotiabank and MD Financial Management, in collaboration with the CMA, to enhance CPD programs, provide awards and scholarships for medical students and residents, and foster a strong future for family medicine in Canada.

Pandemic response
The FAFM established the COVID-19 Pandemic Response and Impact Grant Program thanks to a generous $5 million investment from the CMA Foundation.

New award
The Honours and Awards Program introduced the Val Rachlis Leadership in Family Medicine Award, with a generous endowment established by Dr. Val Rachlis, to celebrate leadership among family medicine residents.

Plan for the future
The Section of Researchers Blueprint 2018–2023 was produced with input from stakeholders across the country. It aligns with the CFPC’s overall strategic plan.6
Addressing training needs

Engaging with residents and teachers is essential to informing the College’s work related to family medicine training. We continue to plan for the future and respond to the challenges and unusual situations that COVID-19 created.

Early-career concerns
Our biennial meeting of the First Five Years in Family Practice Committee, the Section of Residents, and the Section of Medical Students in early March brought together 85 representatives to strengthen collaboration.

Postponement of exams
The spring 2020 sitting of the Certification Examination in Family Medicine was postponed to ensure the safety of all involved. We advocated on behalf of family medicine residents with medical regulatory authorities across Canada to facilitate special provisional licensure for the 2020 graduating cohort based on the successful completion of training until they can complete the exam.

Remote proctoring
Given the uncertainties around travel and social distancing requirements, we worked with our exam service provider to introduce the option of remote proctoring for the fall 2020 examinations.

Virtual teaching and learning
The Section of Teachers (SOT) quickly produced two documents, Tips for Supervising Family Medicine Learners Providing Virtual Care and Emerging Topics Bulletin for Educators: Pearls for Writing a Virtual Care Field Note, to support family medicine educators in adapting to teaching residents virtually.7,8

Training results
Data collection for the Family Medicine Longitudinal Survey was completed for the full cohort of learners who started residency in 2014, finished their training in 2019, and had been in practice for three years in 2019. The data will be used to inform the Outcomes of Training Project, which will define the results expected of family medicine residency training and develop a system for evaluating whether training programs are meeting standards.
current community requirements and preparing for future needs.

Residency profile

Field research was completed for the Family Medicine Residency Training Profile, with input from 375 participants and 75 constituent groups about family physicians’ work. Based on the Family Medicine Professional Profile, it defines what we are aiming for in family medicine residency and forms the basis of recommendations in the final stage of the Outcomes of Training Project.

Updated residency accreditation approach

The CFPC, the Royal College, and the Collège des médecins du Québec launched Canadian Excellence in Residency Accreditation (CanERA). This revised approach to residency program evaluation includes updated standards, addresses consistency across programs and institutions, and contributes to continuous quality improvement.

New assessment objectives

We released the updated edition of the Assessment Objectives for Certification in Family Medicine, which was originally published in 2010. It serves as the foundation for content development for the Certification Examination in Family Medicine.⁹

CFPC by the numbers

The CFPC’s membership count reached 40,000 in April 2020.

The CFPC website averages more than 2 million visits each year.

2019 Membership Survey highlights

- 83% said the CFPC is Canada’s voice for family medicine.
- 75% said the CFPC stands for something important to them.
- 74% said family physicians are recognized for their excellence by the CFPC.

The top three things members said they value about belonging to the CFPC were:

1. Mainpro+
2. Certification in the College of Family Physicians of Canada (CCFP)
3. Canadian Family Physician (CFP)
The Member Interest Groups Section (MIGS) experienced huge growth over the past year. MiGroups, the MIGS online forum, registered 2,000 new members between mid-March and mid-May.

FMF 2019 was a great success in Vancouver with more than 3,500 attendees, 330 Mainpro+ certified sessions, and 3,000 participants at various networking events.

The SOT celebrated its 40th anniversary in 2019. The Celebrating Family Medicine Teaching dinner at FMF, which was part of the SOT’s anniversary celebrations, raised nearly $20,000 to support family medicine education initiatives.

A report on scientific journals from the Web of Science Group indicated CFP had its highest ever impact factor at 2.186 (compared with 1.908 the year before). This puts CFP among the top-ranked family medicine journals in the world.

In the 2020 National Magazine Awards: B2B, CFP took home one gold award for its July 2019 cover and one honourable mention for its May 2019 cover in the Best Illustration category.
New websites
The new CFPC portal went live in November 2019. Our membership platform has a fresh look, lets users update their profiles easily, and provides easy access to College information.

Our redesigned CFPC website debuted in March 2020, offering a modern design, a dynamic home page featuring animated banners, links to current CFPC news, and an intuitive content structure.

New resources
CFP launched the monthly Clinical Inquiries series by the Family Physicians Inquiries Network in which author-formulated questions are answered with the best available evidence.

The CFPC’s Patient Education Committee collaborated with the Patients Experience Evidence Research (PEER) group to publish the PEER Simplified Decision Aid: Osteoarthritis in CFP.10

The SOT released the Guide to Family Medicine Teaching for Preceptors, Teachers, and Educational Leaders.11

The Undergraduate Education Committee released Twelve Points to Consider When Talking to a Medical Student About a Career in Family Medicine, a tool for teachers, preceptors, and residents to use in guiding these discussions.12

The Sport and Exercise Medicine Member Interest Group updated the CFPC’s position statement on Physical Activity Assessment and Counselling in response to a new World Health Organization global action plan on physical activity.13

The CFPC collaborated with Choosing Wisely Canada to develop The Cold Standard Toolkit, which addresses the appropriate management of respiratory tract infections.

As part of our efforts to support the Using Antibiotics Wisely campaign, the CFPC produced resources for patients in Punjabi, simplified Chinese, and Spanish.

The CFPC worked with the Centre for Effective Practice on the release of the Early Lyme Disease Management in Primary Care tool for practitioners as well as a resource for patients.14

New faces at the College

Dr. David Ponka joined the CFPC leadership team as Director of the Besrour Centre.

Steve Slade was appointed the new Director of Research.

Claudia Zuccato Ria joined the College as Executive Director of the FAFM.
International family medicine
The CFPC issued its Position Statement in Support of the Declaration of Astana, a renewed global commitment to build sustainable primary health care for all that has the endorsement of every World Health Organization member state.\textsuperscript{15}

Representatives of the Besrour Centre worked with partners at Moi University in Kenya to provide research support to a community-led mental health initiative in western Kenya.

The Besrour Centre coordinated a team of CFPC representatives to deliver education sessions and develop new working relationships with Chinese physicians at the inaugural Sino-Canadian Forum for Excellence in Residency Education in Shanghai, China.

Through the generosity of Scotiabank and MD Financial Management, the Besrour Centre introduced a fellowship grant for medical education research. It supports research on using teaching methodologies to advance competencies related to pediatric care among health teams.

Going greener
CFP suspended the use of a plastic polywrap for mailing the journal until a cost-effective, environmentally friendly alternative becomes available.

We supported the Canadian Association of Physicians for the Environment’s Call to Action on Climate Change and Health.

To make FMF more environmentally friendly:
• All plastics and non-recyclable materials were eliminated from food services
• More attendees chose to use the FMF App (with 3,500 downloads), reducing the need for print programs
• Hundreds of participants chose to attend virtually via FMF Live
• The main venue was Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design certified
Chapter highlights

Alberta College of Family Physicians (ACFP)

- Collaborated with the CFPC to enhance the GoMainpro online learning platform to make it available to all CFPC members.
- Stepped up advocacy efforts and registered to lobby to support family physicians in government relations and to build public awareness.
- Celebrated the ACFP’s 65th anniversary.

Manitoba College of Family Physicians

- Released several resources related to COVID-19, including Practising Cultural Safety and Humility in the Response To COVID-19 and a series of resilience and wellness resources.

British Columbia College of Family Physicians

- Launched the My Family Doctor Cares public campaign to promote the value of family medicine, advocate for improved access to family physicians, and highlight the availability of family physicians throughout the pandemic.
- Signed the Declaration of Commitment to Cultural Safety and Humility in Health Services for First Nations and Aboriginal People in BC at a special ceremony.
- Changed the Annual Scientific Assembly in April 2020 from an in-person to a virtual event in less than three weeks to accommodate members’ needs during the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Hired its first full-time Executive Director—Lisa Goss—who has been modernizing the MCFP’s operations and building capacity to provide value to members across the province.
- Celebrated Family Doctor Day in May with an official proclamation from the Province of Manitoba recognizing “the valuable and significant contributions family doctors make each and every day to ensure the health of all Manitobans.”
New Brunswick College of Family Physicians (NBCFP)

- Continued advocacy work promoting the value of family physicians, protecting family medicine terminology from misuse, and supporting the need for alternative payment models.
- Implemented strategies to increase the accountability, transparency, and proactivity of the NBCFP’s Board.
- Participated in the Primary Care Task Force, whose objective is to establish best practices and strategies to increase access to primary care for everyone living in New Brunswick.

Newfoundland and Labrador College of Family Physicians (NLCFP)

- Expanded the Director of External Engagement role beyond its initial focus on government outreach to include establishing and maintaining relationships with various partner organizations.
- Gained seats on several working groups with stakeholder organizations as a result of government outreach efforts, which allows the NLCFP to add a family medicine perspective to provincial projects and programs in development.
- Created the Mohamed Ravalia IMG Award, which recognizes excellence in international medical graduates who have committed themselves to becoming respected members and leaders of their local and medical communities.

Nova Scotia College of Family Physicians

- Continued advocacy work drawing on themes from the “We Specialize in You” campaign.
- Held the annual Family Medicine Conference, which included presentations on important topics such as medical assistance in dying, deprescribing benzodiazepines, and LGBTQ+ health.
- Celebrated award recipients at a banquet that included special guests Dr. Donald Brown and Dr. Brian Hennen—two of the first family physicians to be awarded the CCFP Special Designation in 1969.

Ontario College of Family Physicians

- Co-created the COVID-19 Community of Practice with the University of Toronto Department of Family and Community Medicine to help Ontario family physicians learn from each other during the pandemic.
- Continued to support the Primary Care Virtual Community, which provides a collaborative space online for leaders in primary care who want to spark meaningful change in Ontario’s health care system.
- Generated media interest in the 2019 OCFP Awards recipients, resulting in 40 stories in print, radio, and TV across Ontario.

Dr. Mohamed Ravalia received the inaugural award named in his honour from Dr. Nicole Stockley, Past President of the NLCFP.
• Advocated for the adoption of the Patient’s Medical Home vision of care by meeting with government officials regularly and by participating on the steering committee for primary health care reform on PEI.

• Continued to work toward the goal of implementing one fully integrated provincial EMR and virtual care platform for all family physicians and other community-based specialists on PEI.

• Provided the province’s first Practising Wisely session for family physicians, which was well received.

Quebec College of Family Physicians (QCFP)

• Published an analysis of the QCFP’s Mentorship Program in CFP that identified strengths and how the program could be adjusted to address participants’ needs.16

• Released the QCFP’s 2020–2023 strategic plan, which positions the Chapter as a defender of social and environmental causes through the creation of a working group whose aim is to integrate a vision of sustainability and social responsibility into the QCFP’s mission and provide positive, unifying, and apolitical leadership in these areas.

• Launched an updated version (in French) of the training module Practising Wisely: Judicious use of testing and treatment.

Saskatchewan College of Family Physicians

• Organized the largest Dinner with the Docs event to date, which is an informal opportunity for medical students and family doctors to talk about what it is like to practise family medicine.

• Attended and sponsored the inaugural Med Zero event, which the University of Saskatchewan’s Family Medicine Club hosts to introduce first-year medical students to family medicine.

• Introduced the new award My Family Doc Rocks, which lets patients recognize their family physicians for going above and beyond in providing exceptional care.
